

Paris Marriott Charles de Gaulle

The Paris Marriott Charles de Gaulle has always been an ideal place for Paris travellers. Elegant, stylish and convenient, the four star hotel recently underwent a complete overhaul of its pre-function area, 30 air office meeting rooms and ball rooms.

Since the project was completed in September 2016, Paris Marriott Charles de Gaulle has become hugely popular with business travellers and large scale events. In addition to the new board facilities, the hotel also boasts 200 bedrooms and a bar, a restaurant, coffee shop, fitness centre and laundry service.

Elegant, stylish and convenient, the four star hotel recently underwent a complete overhaul.

Vivienne Stadio, an interior architect and design firm with offices in New York and Paris, was tasked with reimagining the space.

The project realistically began with the appointment of a new general manager at the hotel who led the space through a complete makeover previously worked with Vivienne Stadio at a separate Marriott location. He asked the studio to bid on the project. Successful in the bid, the project began in January 2016 and took eight months to complete.

Covering 17,264 sq ft, the work was substantial but a major benefit planned at the hotel months in advance meant it had to be done quickly and without delay. A strict budget also required resourceful thinking with regards materials. Main contractor Woodbar played a crucial role in this regard.

Furniture and lighting in the space has been custom-made, with a contemporary and sleek design. The pre-function area was previously dull and unengaging but is now flooded with natural light, a bright and warm and welcoming color palette. Lighting schemes of varying sizes bring an element of surprise.

Mobile in the meeting rooms are the metal-colored walls with white accents, accented by the black with orange chairs.

In total, the Paris Marriott Charles de Gaulle has 16 mobile meeting rooms including 12 breakout rooms and three new Green Space conference rooms combining design, comfort, brightness and new technology.
